Lack of public money made these of short terms. The poor salaries commanded inefficient teaching talent. Inefficient teachers gave inefficient instruction, and so the public schools suffered both in character and usefulness. In the efforts to secure qualified teachers was discovered Alabama Polytechnic. Institute. the need of normal schools, and the State, in the kindness of her mother heart, established these at Florence, Jacksonville, Livingston, and Troy, adopting courses admitting classes of all grades and granting diplomas to students taking special normal training. The State has also established an agricultural school in each of the nine congressional districts. The public schools have done vast good to the State, and public sentiment is pressing the General Assembly Dr. William Leroy Broun. to munificent appropriations for their maintenance. Population and wealth are increasing. New industries and new enterprises are calling for quickened...
