Excerpt from A Treatise on the Law of Labor Unions: Containing a Consideration of the Law Relating to Trade Disputes in All Its Phases, Internal Administration of Unions, Union Labels, and a Collection of Approved Forms of Pleadings, Injunctions and Restraining Orders Few branches of modern law are of greater importance than that relating to labor unions, and none present more difficult questions for solution, than that part of it which relates to trade disputes. The great increase of litigation in recent times is demonstrated by the fact that the earliest case of which there is any mention was decided prior to the year 1720, and that most of the cases on the subject have been decided within the past two decades. This increase is due to the recent tremendous growth of combinations, both of labor and capital, and to the new questions which are continually being presented for judicial settlement because of the changed economic conditions resulting therefrom. The principal questions in labor union law, in the order of their relative importance are, 1st, The law relating to trade disputes. 2d, The law relating to the internal administration of unions. 3rd, The law relating to the protection of union labels. In respect of the two latter subdivisions, no questions of particular difficulty are presented, although the courts have not always been in entire accord on questions relating to union label law. There is, however, a great lack of harmony in the decisions relating to trade disputes, and many of them, it is believed, are erroneous in principle, and oppressive and unjust to organized labor.
