Excerpt from Matter, Instinct, Mind: Their Nature and Relations: The Closing Lecture of the Second Annual Course of Lectures Before the Maryland Institute of Education Tradition and the dim rays of human reason cast upon the minds of the ancient philosophers the dim shadows of a Deity. In the regularity and splendor of the heavens above - the symmetry and beauty of the earth around them, and the myriad wonders of the deep beneath, they recognized a God but that God was the theos or deus - the Disposer of the Universe, rather than its Creator. They could imagine a great Architect whose skill had fashioned the whole, but their unassisted reason could not rise to the contemplation of a Power to create the material, out of which all things were made. They held the matter, therefore, to be uncreated - eternal like God himself; it being the passive, and he the active principle or plastic power that moulded all things.
