On special occasions, such as inaugural ceremonies, or similar events of general interest, special editions are prepared and ready for delivery by the time the rural brother could come into possession of the details. In fact. I am informed that the system of manufacturing and delivering plate matter is so thorough that fully two thirds of the smaller dailies are made up in this way, except in local news and editorials. We note w th pride the full and complete make-up in the various departments of our metropolitan contemporaries, and remark upon their enterprise in giving to their readers a veritable encyclopedia in the form of a newspaper. But all of these various departments are made up almost exclusively of plate matter. In this age of progress in plate matter, the country editor, without mental effort, can publish a newspaper that rivals in quality and quantity of matter that Of his city brother, whose weekly is made up from the daily. The plate service at the present stage of advancement enables the country editor to divide his journal into departments, change features, and give his readers just what they want. In the news department alone, the plate service affords a great improvement. The editor can now receive his news matter by freight, and yet supply his readers with -iore news, better news, and fresher news, than in the old way of rewriting and resetting news items taken from exchanges,...
