

Zegar Mazel: It All Started in 1951 (Paperback)

By Marc Zegar

BookBaby, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. I heard one of my dear friends say that America was at its best in 1956. I m not sure what he used as a criterion for this opinion, but at this point in my life, I can see his point. Starting at age 5, we walked to school about a mile away with our friends. We all lived in the same tract house development without security gates or fences. It was a time, under some circumstances, when talking to a stranger wasn t dangerous.As a young child, I was free to explore the woods and creeks in our backyard to discover nature on my own terms. My connection to the home on any given day off from school was food. If I was hungry, I either took something with me or stopped home. Otherwise, being on time for dinner was my only requirement. If I wasn t home on time, I might not get any dinner. I think most parents in my neighborhood practiced healthy neglect with their children. We were on our own most of the time, paling around with friends and getting into mischief every so...
