Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from Fort Stanwix and Our Flag Una quart of rum were the brazen, unqualified terms of reimbursement for the savages. The lower Mohawk region through which Colonel Gansevoort and his men had come was a seething pot of strife. Allegiance to the Crown and the cry for free dom were the twin agencies which, barbed by individual decisions, conscientious or otherwise, were dividing families. Leaving fathers and sons in Opposing ranks, making enemies of brothers and turning the love of lifelong friendships to hate. Discontent was rife among the regular troops and the citizen soldiery had mutinied when ordered to the relief of Fort Stanwix. Slowly Burgoyne was hewing his way south, and the forts to the north Crown Point, Ticonderoga and Edward - were, one after another, compelled to surrender. Precious supplies at Whitehall had also been confiscated. Lacking troops, Schuyler could only temporarily retard his advance by felling trees across his path. Because of this, the prospective onslaught, with its reinforcement of British troops, caused much dismay, and members of the Continental Congress found solving the new nation's problems a hazardous and not altogether satisfactory undertaking.
