Excerpt: . . . is at Gods service, for it is from Him. Every moment of my life, every thought of my brain, every garment of my body, every coin in my pocket, all my circumstances, my time, my past, my present, my future, my hopes, my fears, my discipline, my occupation, are fcoly to the Lord. Everything which is devoted to the Lord is most holy. This sort of holiness is not attainable by any amount of effort to work up to it, but by surrender, by receiving of His fulness by faith, and living in the consciousness that Christ really lives in the soul according to the measure of the gift of Christ. This may not be the ordinary conception of holiness, and it was not the conception which I possessed at first, seeing that I clung to the idea that it was something to which...
