Excerpt: . . . CHAPTER VI FATHER WILLIAM F. CLARKE HIS GRAPHIC LETTERS IN RELATION TO THE COLLEGE THE eighth annual reunion of the Society of Alumni took place on the 26th of June, 1888. Quite a large number of the members broke bread together on that evening at the Arlington Hotel in Washington. I sat between Judge William Matthews Merrick, whose death a few months later deprived the College of his matchless services as centennial orator elect, and Father William Francis Clarke, S. J. They talked of their College days of fifty-eight or sixty years before, and told anecdotes of the olden time. Father Clarke said he entered in March, 1829, and although Judge Merrick was the younger, he remarked that he entered a year or two earlier. Father Clarke's life in the ministry, after his graduation in 1833, covered a period of fifty-seven years. Sanctity was...
