

Not Every Woman Swooned (Paperback)

By Elaine Heveron

Plain View Press, LLC, 2010. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . In Not Every Woman Swooned, Heveron reminds us that this being human is a gift, and that every act, every breath, every seemingly benign occasion is somehow sacred. With characteristic humor and humility, she gently guides us through a world made new by her love for it. Ordinary events are distilled into something significant and memorable by her always refreshing way of seeing and naming things: a spilled jar of honey rolls across a floor in a diner like sticky graffiti; after signing a book for a former lover she confesses I wish I d written something obscure. Something like: Thanks for the blackberry tea. This book is a song of praise for the world around us. Heveron writes down the world with gratitude, and as she says in Moutin Reunion, somehow you got to go along. Lisa Starr, Rhode Island Poet Laureate Elaine Heveron s poems are so winning and persuasive that as you read them you feel like the character in one of her poems who is won over by music that has the appeal of a favorite / cousin...
