Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: LAP Lambert Academic Publishing | Earthquakes always influenced the ancient people | From ancient to modern times, earthquakes influenced the human beings. The active faults produced attractive topography to settle. People preferred the vicinity of the fault line as settlement location and they were not aware of the earthquake potential hazards for their location. Therefore, because of the advantage of the location they did not consider to change the place as indicated by rebuilding their settlement repeatedly at the same place after it is damaged. West Anatolia (in today's Turkey's west part) includes too many Roman and Greek period ancient cities that located near the active faults. They damaged many times and rebuilt again. This book is a good reference for the archeologists who work in an excavation field related to settlements and earthquakes. | Format: Paperback | Language/Sprache: english | 176 pp.
