Laminine YTE (Young Tissue Extract) was first discovered by a Canadian doctor in 1929 and used on cancer patients until he died, just before his findings could be properly recognised. Forgotten about for nearly 50 years, a Norwegian egg expert, Dr Bjodne Eskelund, then developed and perfected a process for freeze drying a partially incubated fertilized avian egg embryo to produce an extract, which has resulted in spectacular effects on athletic performance, libido, reducing muscle fatigue and depression, and giving a heightened sense of well-being.
